At a General Court of Election hold' at Plymouth, the seventh Day of June 1659. Before Thomas Prince, Gouvernour, John Alden, Josias Winslow, Thomas Southworth, William Bradford and Thomas Hinkley, Assistants. &c.

FOR AS MUCH as we have good Information that Things are in such a Posture at Kennebeck in Reference to some Troubles among the Indians, some of them being slain, some carried away, and thereby also discouraged, that there is a present desisting from their Hunting; and so a Ceſſation of the Trade, whereby such as have Rented the Trade of the Country, are so far discouraged that they see, and it probably appeareth, that they will not only be disabled for paying the expected Rent; but will be likely to suffer great Losses; and do also fear they may be forced wholly to desist, and to call home their Estate there; whereby the Trade may be indangered to be lost for the future, if some Course be not taken about it;

THE Court do therefore recommend to the several Townships Consideration, and desire they would depute some Man whom they can beſtrut, to ſignify their Minds at the Sitting of the General Court in October next; and impower them to act in the Premises. (P. 164.)
